FYI

Update to be included in the next printing of the Brattleboro Asylum/Retreat Book

The next printing of "A Record of Burials at the Vermont Asylum" will include new information on the possible whereabouts of some of the people who were buried by the Asylum. In doing more research, I have found that the book "Brattleboro Retreat, 1834-1984, 150 Years of Caring" by Esther Munroe Swift and Mona Beach, Brattleboro, VT, 1984, includes erroneous information about the information included in their Burial Book. First of all, The Old Burying Ground that makes up the first page of the book is actually what is now called Prospect Hill Cemetery in Brattleboro, Vermont. This cemetery was once called The Old Village Burial Ground. Some of the people from this page have been found in Prospect Hill in a section that is sparse of stones. It actually looks as though the rest of the people listed could actually be there also among the others but without stones. The second section of the Asylum Burial Book seems to be many of the people who are in their cemetery which is behind Linden Lodge, although there are few stones and certainly not enough room for all the burials that the book states are there. The dates on the stones that are left seem to be in a period between 1850 and 1880. The burial book goes on to say that the Asylum Burying ground was used until 1898, leaving the last section of the book to be called "List of Internments in the new Retreat Cemetery known as Fairview." This cemetery had not been found by me until I came upon a map of the early Retreat Land's that included a small piece of land on their upper fields where the Brattleboro Country Club now has a golf course. This piece is labeled "Cemetery" on the map. On visiting this piece of land, I found a small section of land with young trees and ground very thickly covered with leaves making it hard to look at what might have been. No stones or markers could be seen above this debris. The land is in an odd place, surrounded on three sides by the golf course and one side by the dirt road. It is obviously a piece of land that was not sold to the Country club making the presence of burials there reasonable. I have yet to be able to talk with anyone at the Retreat about this piece however, I have heard many rumors in the years that I have worked on this project that many of the people buried by the Asylum were placed in baskets and taken on wagons to the higher field and buried without stones. This being for lack of family members who wanted to be involved or did not have the money for a burial or stone. This is not uncommon in early asylums.

The other presumption made in the Retreat history book is that many were buried at Morningside Cemetery. I have looked at the burial book for this cemetery that opened about 1900 and have found only two entries for this. The Retreat up until about 1906 was listing on death certificates that the person was buried at the Retreat at "Fairview."

In order to give clear and honest information to those many people who have written to me about relatives who died at the Asylum/Retreat, I feel each and every clue should be included. Thus, this book will soon be revised.

Introduction

The Vermont Asylum for the insane was built in Brattleboro, Windham County, Vermont, as an alternative to the harsh and seemingly inhumane treatment of these patients in the past. The money for the original facility came from the will of Anna Marsh, who died October 14, 1834. Moral treatment for the mentally ill was to be the hospital's main intent. More about the life of Anna Marsh, her intent and the development of the facility can be found in the following book, Brattleboro Retreat, 1834-1984, 150 Years of Caring (Brattleboro, Vermont, 1984) by Esther Munroe Swift and Mona Beach.

The first patient was admitted on December 12, 1836. It took only nine months to fill the facility with 48 patients. With new construction in 1841, the Asylum was able to accommodate 150 patients. In 1886, after fifty years of operation, there were as many inmates as 450 at times. As of 1998, the Vermont Asylum is still a vital part in the mental health system. The name was changed officially to the Brattleboro Retreat on May 27, 1893, as that was deemed more suitable and dignified than one using the word Asylum, which denoted a negative feeling about the mentally ill. This new name suggested a feeling of restfulness and healing.

The question of the deaths and burials of these patients has recently become of interest to those who are ardently seeking answers to genealogical questions relating to their families. It also seems appropriate that these inmates should receive the dignity of having their life recognized in some way, if only in the fact of their death. In an attempt to address these issues, the compiler of this book was, after many months, able to locate a fragile old book entitled The Old Burying Ground: An early journal dated back to the 1830's. This book is in possession of the Brattleboro Retreat and is for all practical purposes not available for public perusal.

With the gracious permission and cooperation of the Retreat and the help of it's librarian, Janet K. Reilly, the listings in that book have been carefully recorded by the compiler and are presented herein just as they appear in the book. Many of the early names and some of the later ones were unreadable as the whole book was handwritten in old script. Most of the "illegible" entries appear only as a squiggly line.

The book itself consists of three separate sections. The first is called "Record of Burials in the Village Burying Ground." The second is "Records of Burials in the Asylum Burying Ground" and dates to 1898. The last section has three entries from 1900 and 1901, and is called "List of Internments in the new Retreat Cemetery known as Fairview." This is where the book stops. This early journal is the topic of the first section of this book.

The next area of research was the town records of Brattleboro. There we found that the early records were sparse and contained little more than names and dates of death. In 1858, the records change as the state began to demand more detailed record keeping, and we begin to find a more accurate record of deaths. It is at this time that the Asylum began to report its deaths to the town. However, with the deaths and particularly those from the Retreat, very little information relative to the identity of the people is included. And here too, we need to note that still not all deaths were recorded. About the year 1905, the reporting of deaths became even more exacting and the town records began to also show the place of burial which had never appeared before in these records.

The second section of this book will list the deaths from the Asylum/Retreat which were recorded in the Town Clerk's office in Brattleboro, VT through 1900. An effort has been made to copy any pertinent information which was there that could help the family genealogist. However, in some cases, as mentioned, this was only date of death and age. Remember too that the Brattleboro Town Clerk has no burial information on these people before 1900, thus making the copy of the burial book a valuable tool for families.

The only item that was not included in this book from the vital records books in Brattleboro was the cause of death. This, most often was given as being, old age, exhaustion, senile dementia and diarrhea. Very rarely would it be noted that the patient died of dementia or anything related to his initial reason for being there.

We extend many thanks to Annette Cagy, Town Clerk of Brattleboro, Vermont, and her staff for their help, patience and continued and enthusiastic interest in this project.

Also remember that the Retreat most often will not provide a researcher with any information pertaining to the patients reason for being admitted or their course of care while there. This is a confidentiality issue and is not something that they are willing to change any time soon. Another reason for the reluctance of the Retreat to provide medical or any other information, may be the fact that most of these records are very old and may not be easily accessed by staff. I do not know this for a fact, however I would like to give them the benefit of the doubt in this case.

So, we ask that you use this book as a genealogical tool, to find missing ancestors and not to discover why they were at the Asylum.

Cleaning up Cemetery

Notable Work Done Under Direction of Dr. Ripley Headstones Replaced, Ground to Be Seeded

Under the direction of Dr. Horace G. Ripley, superintendent of the Brattleboro Retreat, the old "Asylum cemetery" just north of Chase street is being cleaned up, says the Springfield Republican's Brattleboro correspondent. The underbrush has been cut and burned; several cords of wood cut into four-foot lengths and piled at one side; the roots of the trees removed; the ground leveled; the fallen headstones returned to their original positions, and all the surface is to be seeded when the clearing-up process is over. The plot has been a favorite summer playground for the neighborhood children for some years and a short cut to the nearby skiing grounds in winter. Probably more than one-half of the stones have been broken or have toppled over; some are found some distance below the surface, due probably to a succession of layers of soil being washed down from the steep hill just west.

In a history of the first 50 years of the institution, published in 1887, is the following record: "A purchase this year [1846] was effected of 49 square rods of land, contiguous to the first purchased estate, for use as a cemetery. This was bought of Addison Brown for the sum of $92, and has been since preserved to that use. Cost of construction thereon of a receiving tomb $58." As there is nothing nearby which resembles a tomb, it was probably removed when the cemetery came into disuse. The earliest stone noted is in 1848 and the last one to be buried there was about 25 years ago. The state law is such now that the cemetery can no longer be used; if the patient has no funds for burial expenses, his home town must assume the cost and the body is sent back to that town or city. One cannot but be impressed by the number of patients received in the early days from distant states, also the youth of many of them.

Among the places of birth recorded are the following: Putnam county, New York; Mercer county, New Jersey; Middletown, Wis.; Montreal; Newburg, N.Y., and some from Connecticut. It might be said of nearly all as it is of a man from Grand Rapids, Mich.: "He sleepd far from home and in a strange land." Much credit is due Dr. Ripley for his work in cleaning up one of the most neglected spots in the village.

At some time between 1892 and 1896, the original vault which was built at the "Old Burying Ground" was removed and a new one was built in back of what was then the carpenter shop. It is not known if this vault still exists (Swift-Beach).

Part I

"The Old Burying Ground: An Early Journal Dated Back to the 1830's"

Since the first printing of this book, it has been discovered that the people listed on page 2 of this section may actually be all buried in Prospect Hill Cemetery on South Main Street, Brattleboro, Vermont. This cemetery was one of the earliest in the village and was in fact first called 'The Village Burying ground'. In exploring the early stones in this cemetery, six stones listed on page 2 were seen. This does not mean that those were the only ones from this page who were buried here. I think that all from page 2 were actually buried here, many without stones at all and others whose stones have since fallen and been destroyed through the years by weather, vandalism, etc. If others are later found in this cemetery, an addition will be made to this book. The listing on the stones found have been made in italics beside the appropriate person.

Please note that these records are being copied as they were seen. Anything in (italics) has been inserted by the compiler as a help to the researcher. All else — notes, removal notations, etc. were in the actual record. Question marks and (illegible) have been placed beside names that remain undeciphered. The numbers placed beside names and the dates inserted are original notations. Some names were listed with the surname first and others with the surname last, however, for the sake of indexing and easy reading, all names have been listed identical with the surname last.
